Do you know what World Water Day is?

World Water Day occurs annually on March 22nd and is organized by the United Nations. It's a day to think about water and how precious and important it is. We celebrate this with people from all over the world. The theme of World Water Day 2013 is "Water Cooperation".

Let's get ready to connect about water with people from all over the world!

What is the "World Water Day Kids' Summit"?

It's a conference for children held on March 22nd. The World Water Day Kids' Summit offers the next generation a chance to exchange and share their own opinions with others all over the world about water, which is the starting point to help solve this challenging environmental problem. We are hoping the conference will cause an increase in children's ability to co-exist with the Earth and to contribute to society in support of theirs and their own children's future.

In 2013, The conference will be held in Osaka. We will consider together:

"What can we do to conserve and better share water?"

The "Letters for Water" from children will be a very important part of the World Water Day Kids' Summit to tell the world what children thinking about water today.
